

Resource guide to #actintime

There are many organisations, campaigns and individuals working actively towards a sustainable future. Sometimes the information about climate change and climate activism can be overwhelming. But the following list gives you a flexible yet wider choice of resources to get started or continue your efforts within the capacity available for you at the moment. Whether you choose to wean into waste free shopping, sign an online petition, follow a podcast, watch a documentary to educate yourself and your closer community about climate activism, all these individual efforts contribute towards a collective action. Let us all come together to #ActInTime.

Global organisations:

'We are in a Climate Emergency. Decades of increasing carbon emissions are harming the natural and societal systems upon which humanity depends, threatening untold ecological and human devastation if we do not #ActInTime.

The good news: there is still time. Backed by the latest science, the Climate Clock tells us what we must do, by when.

The Deadline and Lifelines on the Climate Clock make explicit the speed and scope of action that political leaders must take in order to limit the worst climate impacts' Visit <https://climateclock.world/science> to find out more.

'Since 1987, Conservation International has worked to spotlight and secure the critical benefits that nature provides to humanity.'
